IN THE BIG OUTDOORS BY GUSTAV J. MEYER

The modern fish hatchery now insures to the descendants an unlimited supply of the best food fish. Indiana streams and lakes are very prolific fresh water fishing areas. It has been proved that man takes better care of the fish fry than does mother Nature. Before man took up the job of "nursery man" to the fish fry, especially of the toothsome black bass, only eight percent of the eggs would hatch in the open waters. Under modern methods of pond culture the percentage has run up to 92 percent.

When this state was new, when means of transportation were limited and crude, when the demand was small, the supply of food fishes in the clear waters of our state seemed inexhaustible. Nature provided for the demand in a bountiful manner, man had but to satisfy his meager desires. There was a time when untold millions of passenger pigeons darkened the sky with their flight, when vast herds of buffalo covered the plains as far east as Indiana. They are gone. Two vast resources of food supply have vanished and are but a memory now. Under the conditions of the present of Indiana. As transportation facilities were extended, as the population and therefore the demand for food fish grew by leaps and bounds, an alarming decrease in the catch became manifest. Men who were making good catches with the ordinary willow pole have been jarred or realizing the fact that unless something is done their pastime is in danger of passing out.

In the meantime fishermen were steadily growing in numbers and in cunning. It was after a careful consideration of scientific and economic problems of the food fish question that the solution came in the form of the fish hatchery. Now 92 percent of the eggs properly cared for under the pond culture system produce fry. Think of that against eight percent under unregulated natural conditions and pollution constantly cutting that small percent down from year to year.

Under natural conditions eggs and fry not only were preyed upon by fishes, insects, crustaceans, reptiles, and fungoids, but were also subject to the eradicating action of the water scouring of the shifting sands in the lakes and sudden rise in the streams caused by downpouring showers which washed the gravel and sediment over the nests of eggs and which washed the fry out into the reeds where they were trapped by the reeding waters. Is it any wonder that only eight percent of the eggs brought forth living young under the conditions.

This is a day of explanation. Public curiosity wisely demands an interest to it. Progress is being made in all lines of business in this day by developing good public feeling, by following this

Only seven of the Irish players were here when it was time to start the game and after a delay Indiana freshmen started at first base and center field for the visitors. The missing players were the Notre Dame third baseman, Darkness, who stopped the game in the seventh inning. Kunkel pitched good ball for the Crimson and received good support in the clinch. Umpires Jones and Powell announced at the start that Notre Dame forfeited the game 9 to 0 because of the inability of the team to put a full nine on the diamond.

Texas Congressman Raps G. O. P. For Bluffing and Trying To Fool People On Repeal of War Measures

By JOHN J. CARSON.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—A challenge to the republican majority of the house to bring in resolutions repealing war legislation, instead of "camouflaging" by the adoption of peace resolutions which are unconstitutional, has been made in a stirring speech by Rep. Tom Connally, of Texas.

Rep. Connally, who aroused great applause on the democratic side, referred to the disorganization existing in republican ranks and asserted that Rep. Mondell, the g. o. p. floor leader "wears a crown of paper."

"You bring your family squabbles on the floor after day and expose them to public view," said Rep. Connally. "The chairman of your appropriations committee, Mr. Good, and your leader, Mr. Mondell, do not properly meet. All day yesterday you had a filibuster engineered by one of your factions and another over the right field wall. Philadelphia's major league games have produced 25 home runs in the last 14 playing days. Score: Boston 8, Philadelphia 4."

G. O. P. Only Bluffing.

"What you are interested in is not the repeal of these wartime statutes, but the creation in the public mind of the belief that you want them repealed. If you want them repealed, simply introduce a resolution. It can pass the house and pass the senate."

Rep. Connally referred to the president's veto of the Knox peace resolution. The house failed to override the veto and the position of the president was sustained. Mr. Connally said the republicans knew all the time that the making of peace by simple resolution was unconstitutional as well as that it was unfair and dishonorable treatment of the allies of the United States in the world war.

"You knew the president under his oath of office is required to veto that resolution," said Rep. Connally. "Why do you make this pretense of thus repealing war measures? You do not want them repealed."

The last statement was greeted with laughter and jeers on the republican side and Connally replied: "Well then, why do you not repeal them? Why do you not bring them?"

CUBS DEPEND ON DUET OF HURLERS

Grover Alexander and Hippo Vaughn Must Bear Brunt of Burden.

By HENRY L. FARRELL.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, June 1.—Jim Vaughn's shoulder can't stay lame very long without beaching a very good Cubish that is steaming pent good or thereabouts.

Fred Mitchell has only two aces—Alexander the Great and "Hippo" to play for a $100,000 pot. If one of them loses his color he may just as well throw his whole hand in the discard.

The pennant can be won on two pitchers as Kid Gleason showed the team in 1919 but they have to be iron men.

Stan Coveleskie and Jim Bagby have been his lone dependable hurlers.

May Have Trouble.

But if the Cubs or the Indians run into a bunch of bad weather and find themselves facing a late season schedule filled with double-headers they may have to give way to another club.

If either team should have a task put to them like the champion Reds had last summer when they played the Giants six games in three days, they might crack.

Of course, it can be reasoned that two star hurlers like Alexander and Vaughn, Coveleskie and Bagby, Williams and Cletotte, are better than a whole staff of stars with temperamental arms such as Pat Moran and John McGraw have been nursing along but it's a convenient pleasure to have a bunch of less spectacular ones around to win a few ball games.
